The Lowdown

By IMA GONNA TELLA

The "Fourth" is over! Not that you all don't fully realize it but what worries us most is there will be no more vacations this semester—or next either. So that is that.

You know after a holiday we ordinarily have just plenty of good old news—no, we mean plenty of new news, but this one has come so close to press day we can't dig it up and have it in time.

Don't worry though—there is a next week and by that time we hope we will be able to tell you who had a late date with who and why. We do have a couple of hot tips but some research will be necessary, so exercise that patience and we'll be telling you.

We heard something on Harvey Hardin alias "Jean Harlow," basketball star and Jamie Duncan and Mary Belle Jagers last week. There is that inevitable triumvirate again.

Seems like we have such a hard time finding out something about just two people—there always has to be three or four or more. Makes it so complicated and for college students we have to be careful of complications. Terrible thing, complications. Almost gave us a stiff neck one time.

But here is where the girl friend goes away for the summer and returns again for a visit and comes back to "complications." Now Harvey was a fine lad, trodding the straight and narrow, and being just as good as could be while Jamie was here, but alas, Jamie leaves for her vacation and while the cat's away you know what always happens.

So Harvey started playing with Mary Belle Jagers. And while we think of it we do give Harvey credit for good taste—we almost would like that too. Then Jamie came up for a little visit, longing and with expectations—you know a month or two of separation makes expectations run so high. At least it always did with us. One time it went to 104—we had a terrible time, could hardly eat.

But Jamie's expectations were fulfilled and Mary Belle's weren't. Why, oh why, will these boys do that way? And all of which goes to prove that distance does lend enchantment—up to a certain point.

So now we have some one explaining again, and, judging from the result, he must be another one of those good explainers. On the surface things seem to have resumed their normal trend but you know still water runs deep and a volcano is usually very quiet just before it starts action.

And another thought has just come to mind—rather a memory recalled, which we might mention while on this subject. Harvey, alias Jean Harlow, has given to Henry Baker the well known ozone, as far as Mary Belle is concerned. He really seems to have fixed Henry up because we never see Henry and Mary Belle together anymore and it used to be quite steady.

And so we change the "way of a maid with a man" to the way of a man with a maid!

Now we slip back to our Patrick Henry. Didn't you know we had a Patrick Henry? Oh, my yes. This really makes two and maybe three. Two for certain—we are sure of that.

This last Patrick has been going on since Xmas, fact is, since Frank Emberger left. And we were sure Frank was a "Patrick Henry" for he was always running around wanting Liberty or death.

And now on every street corner, in every classroom and corridor, we hear Glenn Elkenberry saying "give me Liberty or give me death." Glenn we really hope you get Liberty although we aren't certain which is the lesser of the two evils.

AMERICANISM?

July 4, 1776, a group of men gathered around a table and signed their names to a document thereon. Since that moment, that date has been proclaimed the most significant in all American history. On that day this nation claimed its freedom.

Each year on July 4 since the signing of the Declaration of Independence the people have celebrated that event. It has come to hold a place in American tradition surpassed by none. In times of fortune the people have hailed the day with great joy. In periods of stress we have looked on it as a day to remember the courage of our fathers, and to again pledge faith and belief in the United States. This country is now at a period where every expression of faith and belief in this nation is not only needed but a necessary element that should be recalled forcefully to the hearts of every American.

July 4, 1933, the students of Western Kentucky Teachers College sat in class rooms only vaguely aware of the day, ignoring the greatest event in American history.

MODERN BIBLES

Dean Inge has joined forces with modern church leaders who believe the language of the Bible is antiquated.

Preaching at St. Paul's Cathedral, Dean Inge said: "I do think this is an irreligious age."

"In the two places which I know well—the two great universities—it seems to me that there is more keenness about religion, more real earnestness now than when I was young."

"At the same time it is true that large sections of the population are out of touch with Christianity."

"We cannot expect a working man whose education has been a smattering of purely modern subjects, and whose main interests are in problems of work and wages and politics, to feel himself at home with either the Bible or the Prayer Book."

"They are not written in his language."

"We need a great constructive labor of Christian theology which shall make the faith intelligible and satisfying to those whose education has been of the modern type."

"The modern man wants to be a real Christian. He wants to hear the real gospel of Christ from the pulpit. But he must hear it in the tongue in which he was born, and not in the tongue of 1,500 years ago."

The Great European Passion Play presented by the Freiburg Players was not only a masterful drama superbly produced, but is truly an inspiration.

"GOLD DIGGERS" SETS MOST ELABORATE EVER STAGED FOR PICTURE

Dances and ensembles for Warner Bros. musical and dramatic spectacle "Gold Diggers of 1933," which opens at the Capitol Theatre starting Wednesday, are said to be the most lavish and ornate ever produced in a talking motion picture.

Two hundred girls in silken helical skirts dance on a helical stairway in the exquisite "Shadow Waltz" number. During the dance, the girls play upon illuminated violins, winding around the giant stairway, whirling about a glistening pool and an equally glistening floor. It is a triumph of rhythm, color and beauty.

For the "Petting in the Park" number an entire park with benches, mounds, trees of spun glass and silk, and a background of fantastic shapes and forms was constructed. The number itself is fast and zippy, boys and girls together and like nothing ever seen before.

For "The Forgotten Man" number the girls romp over gigantic tread mills on which they keep ever going but never arriving.

A background of silver coins as large as the proscenium arch of a theatre, silver coins for wings and silver coins for costumes form the elaborate setting for "We're in the Money," another of the unusual numbers in this unusual picture.

These dances and ensembles were created by Busby Berkeley with songs by Warren and Dubin, who wrote the hit music in "42nd Street." The production itself is based on Avery Hopwood's play and carries a full star cast, including Warren William, Joan Blondell, Aline MacMahon, Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell, Guy Kibbee, Ned Sparks and Ginger Rogers. Mervyn LeRoy directed.

Up to mid-May of the current season, Lonnie Warneke, leading pitcher of the National League has never hurled an inning in the Philadelphia park.

THE LOWDOWN

But this Liberty Ferrari does have some fatal attraction for the other sex, for even before Glenn and Frank, there was that Polish lad, Steve Shlanta.

A hint to the wise is sufficient, Glenn. After much investigation we find this Steve boy returns to town every now and then, as you probably already know, and we find he still carries some weight.

Just as you reach the pinnacle of success, Steve may come back to town and then where will you be. Yeah, that's what we are asking you. Where will you be?

It's hard to imagine anyone asking for publicity in our little column, but believe it or not, we had two requests this week and we feel duty bound to see if we can't lend a helping hand. That friend in need.

But Mary Lou Coleman and Sue Farley believe that a little mention may pep things up a bit and so here it is. Boys, even if this did come second-hand we think you should do what you can—if nothing else than for the dear old paper. So Sue and Mary Lou, we prophesy results—stay by the phone for the next day or two and we'll bet most anything but money you won't have so many dull moments for awhile.

And now permit us to digress for just a moment, but we can't let one of our friends, who furnishes more news for the old Lowdown column than any other individual, escape from town without some honorable mention.

This person or rather personage is none other than our own beloved "Little Racketeer," Miss Elizabeth Robbins. She is really a sweet "gal" as so many will testify and we were so worried for a long time that she might disrupt the male population that we had to tell all and show the boys what they were running into.

But Elizabeth has at last found her man in Louie Walker and life is again untroubled. Sorry to say

NONSENSE

Fourth of July on the Hill was certainly a close affair.

The punch you get at some parties certainly carries a wallop.

A couple of little gals from the country attending summer school, unable to accustom themselves to the sidewalks took off their shoes and walked down Fifteenth street by the tobacco barn letting their toes feel the dust seep up between their toes—Happy and home like.

In answer to questions as to the object of this column. Naw it ain't so dumb it's supposed to be funny.

The gal that nearly got choked at the Twelfth Street Inn certainly isn't old maidish.

Movie Star (using new toilet preparation)—This is awful stuff. Why did you buy it?

Her Maid—I read an advertisement in which you praised it highly. —Boston Transcript.

Moles may be removed by sliding down Pike's Peak—on the moles. —Colliers.

A jealous woman holds a man guilty of everything until he proves his innocence. After he proves his innocence she merely suspects him. —Colliers.

Henry—Did you-all evah speak before a large audience, Gwage? Gwage—Ah low ah did, once yowsah.

Henry—What did you-all say? Gwage—Ah said, "Not guilty." —Farm Journal.

Harking back to the matter of inflation, have you noticed how the grand old scofflaws swell up a little bit every time another state votes on repeal?—Macon Telegraph.

Among other common things the uppity folks turn up their noses at is sense.

The old fashioned girl who married a man who could provide her with a good home, now has a daughter who looks around for one who can provide her with a good car.—Sam Hill.

ROBINSON, Ill.—State's Attorney J. Stanley Bradbury said he had discovered five or six reasons why he wished to remain a bachelor. All of them came into his office. They included:

Two sons gave their father a beating when he refused them a car. A stepson threatened to kill his mother with a butcher knife.

Parents asked advice on how to keep the daughter home nights.

A woman complained her husband had beaten her, but she did not wish to have him arrested.

A husband complained his father-in-law had a young bride locked up at home and was waiting for him with a shot gun.

The DeMolay bathing beauty contest was a flop—the gals must have forgotten to bath.
